INDIA TODAY takes the RTI route to find out the status of long pending cases against civil servants only to discover that the cosy relationship that bureaucrats share makes the wheels of justice grind real slow

FAWZAN HUSAIN

SUBHASH SHARMA

IAS

Accused of causing wrongful loss of Rs 62 lakh to the government. Conspired with people to obtain illegal gratification for showing undue favour.

Status:

CASE UNDER TRIAL. MAJOR PENALTY RECOMMENDED.

retire. The cases are still in a trial stage, but two years after he retired, his name surfaced in the Rs 4,000 crore Cooperative Group Housing Societies scam in Delhi. He finally surrendered in a court on January 30, 2006.

That bureaucrats share a cosy and often over-protective relationship was made amply clear when INDIA TODAY took the Right to Information route to seek details from the director of prosecution, CBI, of corruption cases registered against IAS, IPS and IRS officers since April 1, 1992. The original RTI application was filed on April 7, 2007 and it took a year and over 100 applications and appeals to get this information. Some departments tried obfuscatory tactics, though on the directive of CBI Director Vijay Shankar we were able to make some headway. Likewise, we asked DORT to provide information regarding the action
