taken against IAS officers against whom corruption cases were filed. Similar requests were sent to the Home Ministry regarding IPS officers and to the Finance Ministry, Central Board of Direct Taxes (CBDT) and Central Board of Excise and Customs (CBEC) for details on IRS officers, and also to the Central Vigilance Commission (CVC), which recommends departmental action in all such cases.

The replies—apart from that of CBDT which wrote back, "providing such details for publication in media would not be appropriate"—brought out some interesting facts:

Of the 48 IAS, 17 IPS and 98 IRS-Customs and Central Excise Service (c&CES) officers, cases against 15 IAS, seven IPS and 35 IRS officers are still under investigation. Others are closed due to various reasons or are under trial in various courts. According to the Home Ministry, two IPS officers against whom cases were filed, expired. "Cases against seven are under investigation by CBI while those against eight are sub judice." According to DoPT, only one accused IAS officer has been penalised. Vijay Parmar of Gujarat cadre against whom a case was registered in May 1999 retired on December 31, 2000 and a 50 per cent cut in his pension was imposed on November 30, 2005. DoPT does not have any information on the follow up action against 13 other IAS officers. While the total
