Which are the most innovative companies in India? And what do they do to create value that is fundamentally different from what their rivals do? For the first such survey in India, Business Today tied up with The Monitor Group, founded in 1983 by Harvard Business School's strategy don Michael Porter and his colleague Mark Fuller. It throws up fascinating insights into how India Inc. is adapting to the globalised world while, at the same time, changing the rules of the game.
