

YASBANT NEGI

Rs 50 lakh upwards in royalty on their books every year and are familiar names for all commerce students.

"We want to show that we are serious about quality," says Jain, the man who dreams of making SRCC a world-class business school. There are many like banking firm Lehman Brothers which are already convinced about this. Evidence? An SRCC graduate was offered a record salary of Rs 14 lakh per annum this year by the company. Just so that the picture is not distorted, the average salaries hover around Rs 6 lakh per annum. And if you're looking for leadership qualities and the ability to swim against the tide, close to 10 per cent of SRCC graduates end up as first generation entrepreneurs, setting up their businesses right after college. "There is definitely a diversification happening here," explains Jain. While a decade ago a majority of SRCC products would end up as CAS, CFAS or IIM graduates, today, there are entrepreneurs, media professionals, politicians, flag-bearers in the NGO sector, even bureaucrats. In fact, the 2008 civil services toppers in the women and ST categories, Ashima Jain

PILLARS OF SUCCESS: Jubilant students of SRCC, Delhi

and Mukul Arya, respectively, happen to be SRCC graduates.

While SRCC is known for its undergraduate commerce and economics course, things might soon change with the post-graduate programme in international business management getting revamped. "I want to create my own model institution which sets a benchmark for others," says Jain. Case studies, role play and anecdotes are adopted as part of the teaching methodology in the college even though the examination system of the Delhi University values rote learning over practical experience.

Giving stiff competition to SRCC is second ranker Loyola of Chennai which has moved up from its third rank last year. The commerce department of the college provides its students an international programme on national entrepreneurial network, which is the only of its kind in south India. "It is one of the many training programmes which makes our commerce department one of the leaders," says Father Albert

Apni Kalpanaon ko saakaar kijiye

Enter the fascinating world of JK White Cement: a world shaped by your imagination and JK White Cement's versatility; where every creation becomes a masterpiece, where each pattern exudes class.

With SFP fortified JK White Cement, you can create patterns by using it with pigments & marble chips; mould sculptures, motifs; fix and beautify mosaic tiles and a lot more. Come; experience JK White Cement, experience beauty in its finest form.

Silky finish, Magical strength

Marketing Office:

Ghalib Institute, Aiwan-E-Ghalib Marg (Mata Sundri Lane),
New Delhi - 110 002. Ph.: 23233904 (5 Lines)

Fax: 91-11-23230697. E-mail: cementjk@vsnl.com

dentsucomm/jk/023/08