City-level ranking of a college is determined by its scores in the Top 50 national ranking. For those colleges that do not figure in the top-50 list, only perceptual scores were considered for the ranking.

GIANT STRIDES: Chennai's Loyola College is not far behind too

GIRISH GV

Muthumalai. Wizards like chess world champion Viswanathan Anand are products of the Loyola's commerce department. Every year the college adds value through partnering with international institutions and organisations. This year it signed an MOU with the Management Development Institute of Singapore and the London Metropolitan University (LMU) to develop undergraduate and post-graduate programmes and for a range of academic exchanges.

Third position holder, St Xavier's College, Kolkata, has always been the goal for aspiring commerce graduates with most making a beeline for admission to it the minute Class 12 results are out. The morning section, a male bastion even today, is known as a centre for excellence. Not being able to withstand pressure from the girls, the college finally opened its gates to them in 2006. While this batch is yet to appear for university honours examinations, Principal, Father P C Mathew SJ, is confident that the excellent standards set by the morning section over decades will be followed by the evening students too. Nearly 60 per cent of students appearing for B.Com come up with a first class. For the 950 seats available in B.Com (morning and afternoon sessions), about 3,200 applications are received. The college recently started an M.Com course and plans to maintain its excellent track record even here.

Delhi's prestigious Lady Shri Ram College for Women (LSR) is perhaps the best destination for commerce for those who'd like to learn the ropes of finance along with getting adequate exposure to extra-curricular activities. Last year, LSR started an exchange programme with the National University of Singapore. This is in addition to the earlier exchange programmes with Latrobe, Melbourne.

For big mover Stella Maris College of Arts and Commerce in Chennai, there is an additional challenge of churning out quality students despite the many first-generation learners it takes along with the majority that score well above the minimum cut-off of 90 per cent. It conducts special coaching classes for them before the commencement of regular classes. Every year 32-40 students from the commerce group get placements in banks through campus interviews. "We have a democratic set-up where every student has the freedom to suggest ideas. We make them confident and empower the younger women to face the challenges of the future," says principal, Sister Jessindha Quadras.
