Oxford as a recipient of the Felix and Shell Centenary Scholarships with little out of pocket expenses while Swetha Balakrishnan, who bagged the Inlaks Scholarship, chose Harvard over Oxford and Columbia universities for her higher legal studies.

Their distinction is reflective of the learning ethos at NALSAR, which, as the fifth batch passes out this year, has emerged as the top law school in the country. Ranked No. 2 for the last two years, NALSAR has finally toppled the formidable National Law School of India University (NLSIU), Bangalore, from the numero uno position it had been occupying for several years. While NLSIU slips to the second position, the 84-year-old Campus Law Centre (CLC), Delhi University, is up from fifth
