Overall ranks are based on perceptual and factual scores, not on perceptual and factual ranks. Therefore, the overall rank of a college may be different from its perceptual and factual ranks. (-) Did not figure in the Top 25 last year.

to third place. The National Law Institute University (NLIU), Bhopal, has dropped from the third rank last year to the fourth this time. Moving up again to the fifth slot, which it occupied in 2005, from the eighth last year is the ILS Law College, Pune. The West Bengal National University of Juridical Sciences, Kolkata, retains the fifth slot. The National Law University, Jodhpur, has fallen from No. 4 to No. 9 as it performed poorly on perceptual rank (No. 10) in rating analysis.

What has helped NALSAR emerge on top is the consistency in training and the holistic educational experience offered with superior infrastructure. "We inculcate qualities in students: a commitment to ethics, diversity, public interest, and social justice," says Vice-Chancellor Professor Ranbir Singh. He argues NALSAR's reputation "has grown dramatically and it is known for developing lawyers of strong character who become the best of legal professionals".

In the first two years the course is a nice blend of social sciences and law subjects. Social sciences include two papers each in history, economics, sociology and political science. This is the only law college with a fully residential course. Also, a limited student intake and several professors staying on campus make learning more focused and meaningful. It admits just 60 students to the BABL (Hons) course and if all 20 seats for foreign nationals are not filled up they are offered to Indian students. Its world class infrastructure includes facilities like video conferencing for a virtual universal classroom, a teachers' convention centre and an exclusive moot court hall. The well-stocked library, coupled with a highly qualified and competent faculty, has enabled students to graduate creditably.

NALSAR, apart from core competence in legal education tempered to societal needs, inculcates both time management and discipline. Teaching promotes the interface between law and justice which is a strength that the students have capitalised on to pursue further studies at universities abroad or take to diverse professions. An interesting rule on the 50-acre campus called Justice City: students are not allowed to use mobile phones anywhere in the academic block and the library.
