Vijay Tendulkar was a writer who inspired, a writer whose each thought and word had a soul of its own. He was a genius who motivated all and created real life characters through his plays and screenplays.

Paying for Sins

The humiliation suffered by the Marxists in Panchayat elections in Nandigram and Singur is a clear indicator of the waning popularity of Buddhadeb Bhattacharya ("Revenge in Nandigram", June 2). The results are a crushing blow to CPI(M) which has no meaningful reforms to offer.

A Dalit Twist

What is wrong with Mayawati becoming the next prime minister ("Deconstructing Maya", June 2)? She is no less than Rahul or Sonia Gandhi. In the 47 years that the Congress has ruled, not once has a Dalit been allowed to come forward as a leader. Now the Congress is interested only in Dalit votes, but would hate a Dalit becoming a prime minister.

No Arrest

I am stunned by the news published in your magazine about Bishop K.P. Yohannan's arrest ("In God's Name", June 2). I, being a bishop of Believers Church, can boldly testify the integrity of our spiritual leader. This has hurt many faithful members of our church and its image.

REV. THOMAS P. S., on e-mail

I am saddened by the remarks INDIA TODAY made without checking the authenticity of the report published. It has damaged our image. Kindly make immediate amends to correct the image of the church.

REV. S. MATHEW, on e-mail

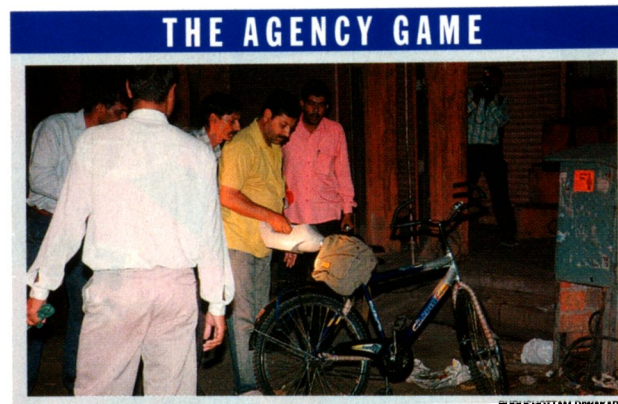

The Editor's reply: We regret the error. Our sincere apologies to the Bishop and his followers.

In the law stream in "India's Best Colleges" (June 2), the third rank is for the entire Faculty of Law, University of Delhi, and not just the Campus Law Centre, which is only one of its three centres. In the engineering stream, the full form of the acronym for the 23rd ranker IIT, Allahabad is Indian Institute of Information Technology and not 'international' institute as published. The errors are regretted.

It's a sound idea to have a Central agency like FBI in India to fight terrorists ("Elusive Agency", June 2). Each state could have its own intelligence wing but a federal one could oversee such agencies and provide the needed inputs for better coordination and actions.

D.B.N. MURTHY, Bangalore

The Government's failure to create a federal anti-terrorism agency is a serious fault. The IB can be used for this purpose by creating a special cell and empowering it properly with investigative and punitive powers.

NUTAN THAKUR, Lucknow

Politicians must show unanimity in countering the menace of terrorism. The stand-off between state and Union governments over the issues of FIA proposed by the prime minister is extremely deplorable. Do politicians not know that there is no dearth of other befitting issues to politick?

Thief's Toothache

It may not be prudent to have a toothache if you are an employee at the Government's bank note press at Dewas, near Indore, Madhya Pradesh. Not since one of the workers, who had duped the security staff into believing that he had tooth trouble, allegedly smuggled four Rs 50 notes by concealing them in his mouth. The supposedly foolproof security system of the printing plant, complete with closed-circuit cameras scrutinising movement of the staff and under-underwear pokes known as the "naked searches", failed to curb the temptation to steal from heaps of currency notes. There have, however, been two reported instances of missing bank notes at the press which began churning out notes in March 1975. The mystery of 15 Rs 100 notes that vanished into thin air in January this year remains unsolved despite the Rs 1,500 reward.
