

festival

Celebrating Art

DELHI With the summer reaching its peak and most musicians holidaying abroad, the Legend of India Music Festival, starting May 23, comes as a refresher to rejuvenate parched creative sensibilities. Over the past 10 years, the festival has been organised across the country, and has seen participation by over 150 artistes. "Legends of India wanted to bring art forms out of their esoteric niches into the popular domain," says founder Dipayan Mazumdar. The festival has successfully showcased classical art forms, besides the "legends in the making".

On day one, dancer Astad Deboo with Manipuri martial artistes will take you on a unique rhythmic voyage. Deboo is a dynamic dancer who uses different art forms as a base to create something that is contemporary. "I am bored with the conventional proscenium stage. My dance is like a river flowing into different tributaries," he says. This presentation will be followed by a santoor recital by Pandit Shiv Kumar Sharma, who is a favourite on the concert circuit, thanks to his unique interaction with his instrument and the great heights he has taken the art form to.

On the second day, you can be a witness to the parivar concert as masters from the Benaras gharana—Pandit Rajan and Sajan Mishra—will perform along with Ritesh and Rajnish Mishra, the sons of elder brother Rajan Mishra, who are all set to carry forward the tradition of the Benaras gharana. On the third day, the voice from across the border, Rahat Fateh Ali Khan, will enthral the audience with his Sufi music. A spiritual finale to the festival. Be there. At Kamani Auditorium. Till May 25.

by S. Sahaya Ranjit

REVELRY: Rahat Fateh Ali Khan (above); a presentation by Deboo with Manipuri martial artistes

art exhibition

Pursuit of Happiness

MUMBAI The present exhibition is a continuation of Priti Kyal's work on her first two collections—Images of Love in 2003 and Moments of Truth in 2006. From painting the instances of her life that added colour to the canvas to dabbling in themes and styles of an intensely aware existence, Kyal's art has been motivated by the external environment and her inner spirit. Her current body of work, Ananda, has Kyal exploring the journey of happiness within her and the subjects are portrayed as a tiny part of the huge cosmos. This collection is not only about people but also about the vast universe. Her choice of colours emphasises the state of her freedom and reveals an imaginative mind at work. The ornate quality of patterns and designs lends a sensitive and feminine touch. Through form and texture, Kyal captures the state of bliss of the true yogi. At the Jehangir Art Gallery, from June 16 to 22.

by Swati Mathur

THE SENSITIVE TOUCH: Kyal's untitled work

exhibition

Perfect Montage

DELHI The National Gallery of Modern Art and Goethe-Institute at Max Mueller Bhavan are jointly holding an exhibition, Fluxus in Germany from 1962 to 1994—A Long Story with Many Knots. More than 300 original works comprising books, posters, music scores, rare films, photographs and installations will be on display. The artists include Joseph Beuys, Robert Rehfeldt, Daniel Spoerri. At the National Gallery of Modern Art. Till June 4.

Signs of Time by Rehfeldt