

T. VENKATRAM REDDY
48, MEDIA BARON (35)

NEWS WORTHY

BECAUSE he looks well on his way to becoming a southern newspaper powerhouse, with two editions of his flagship Deccan Chronicle in Hyderabad and Chennai, another one to go in Bangalore, and a new business daily by year-end. Because he has trained his sights on India's richest sport, paying top dollar—below only Mukesh Ambani—for Indian Premier League's Hyderabad team. Because ever since he discovered Internet penetration is highest in south India, he is intent on exploiting it, with papyrusclubs.com—an online newspaper community—and a soon-to-be-launched e-paper. Because he is ready to soar with his cargo airliner, Flyington Freighters, on the wings of aircraft he has bought for $1.1 billion (Rs 4,400 crore).

THE ROAD AHEAD:
Has bought four acres, not far from the Electronic City, to launch the Bangalore edition of Deccan Chronicle.

SIGNATURE LOOK:
The new Vijay Mallya-inspired hairdo.

LIKES TO: Collect old manuscripts connected to Hyderabad's heritage.

PRATAP C. REDDY
75, DOCTOR (47)

HEALING TOUCH

BECAUSE under his stewardship Apollo Hospitals has grown to become the largest healthcare provider in Asia with a leadership position in every sphere of the value chain, from pharmacies to diagnostic clinics, medical transcription services to telemedicine. Because the hospital group, with a turnover of nearly Rs 1,000 crore, is now the world's third largest private healthcare provider with 10,400 beds. Because he was instrumental in the amendment of various legislations including a change of the law for cadaver transplants in India.

FOOD FAD: Seafood, vegetables and fruits.

FAVOURITE VACATION SPOT: A herbal garden at his native Aragonda village in the Chittoor district of Andhra Pradesh.

TOUGH GUY TALK: "Find a way along the less travelled path and innovate."

THORN IN HIS SIDE: That the health care industry has not yet been given infrastructure status.