

BHASKAR PAUL

■ KUMAR MANGALAM BIRLA

40, INDUSTRIALIST (5)

THE SILENT SUCCESS

BECAUSE he is the Birla who matters most. Because he has taken his group's revenues from $13 billion to over $25 billion and the market capitalisation from $13 billion to $32 billion in a year. Because he has quietly expanded his business into new areas, from retail to BPO. Because he has listed and made Idea work, acquiring 20 million subscribers. Because he has set up 230 supermarkets in a year, taking his total retail presence to 400 stops across India. Because his Hindalco Novelis—the largest aluminium rolling company—is on the Fortune 500 list. Because his group is the largest producer of viscose staple fibre.

HE LIKES TO LET HIS WORK SPEAK FOR ITSELF, BE IT THE RS 100 CRORE A YEAR INVESTMENT IN SOCIAL INITIATIVES OR THE BEST EMPLOYER TITLE FROM THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

NEXT BIG THING: Acquisition of GE Money's loan and mortgage business, which he has bid for.

WORKING STYLE: Six days a week, nine-to-nine. Last year, there was no vacation.

QUALITY TIME IS SPENT WITH: His children, the three As, Aryaman Advaitesha Ananyashree.

LITTLE KNOWN FACT: Is a crack shot with the rifle. He practises at Mumbai's Mahalaxmi range.

AMBITION: To make it to Fortune 150 by 2012.
