TRAIN REIGN

BECAUSE the Delhi Metro Rail Corporation (DMRC) is now the role model for other modernising cities. Because not only is DMRC self-sustaining, only one among five such metros in the world, it is also carbon conscious, having prevented 3,968 tonne of poisonous gases from being emitted annually. Because with the IGI airport link ready by 2010, commuters will be able to reach the airport from the New Delhi railway station in just 18 minutes. Because by 2021, over 413 km of Metro track would have been laid out in the NCR which will overtake the London metro, the longest till date at 408 km.

DIET SECRET: No eggs, no milk. Likes fried peanuts though.

IS EMBARRASSED ABOUT: Sleeping too much, or so he thinks—seven hours at night and 15 minutes in the day.

UNUSUAL POSSESSION: Is fond of watches—he is a stickler for time—owns two dozen. Particularly likes a Swiss watch, Candino, as it loses only three seconds in a year.

STRANGE, BUT TRUE: Is computer ignorant. Never uses one. Takes a long time to type his own name.

PITCHING HARD

BECAUSE his DTH service Dish TV with 2.7 million subscribers and 55 per cent market share has a first mover advantage. Because he never gives up without a fight, whether it is control of the news agency, UNI, or the formation of ICL. Because after eight years, Zee TV is now within shouting distance of market leader Star TV. Because as the broadcast battle shifts to the skies, he plans to make a bid to be the gatekeeper, becoming the first private operator to launch a satellite.

LITTLE KNOWN FACT: That he runs the world's number one laminated tubes company, Essel Propack.

COOL BUDDY: Railway Minister Lalu Prasad who appeared on a Zee reality show and offered a stadium when BCCI talked tough.

NEW PASSION: A tourism-related but freshly controversial SEZ on 1,000 acre of land near Mumbai.

FUTURE HEADACHE: Who will control the empire? There are seven sons among four brothers, including two of his own.
