

HARISH SALVE
52, ADVOCATE (34)

RIGHTS WARRIOR

BECAUSE he is a counsel with a conscience. Because as public prosecutor, he won the Uphaar case in the trial court against the Ansals despite this being his first criminal trial in a lower court, pro bono for a fee of Re 1. Because when Mukesh and Anil Ambani fight, he represents the older brother but when Anil battles the spectrum case, he asks Salve to represent him. Because he may be charging corporates fat cat fees but he is also idealistic enough to fight for human rights, whether it is defending Bilkis Bano in the Gujarat riots or Samir Hingora and Yakub Memon in the Bombay blast case. Because when it is Fali Nariman and Ram Jethmalani on one side, it is usually only Salve on the other. Because almost everyone on INDIA TODAY's power list has been represented by him.

J.P. GAUR
77, INDUSTRIALIST (NEW)

POWER BUILDER

BECAUSE with power, cement, infrastructure, hospitality, construction, real estate and education, the Rs 5,500-crore Jaypee Associates has a foothold in 14 states. Because the company is diversifying into wind and thermal power generation, airports, oil and natural gas exploration. Because it will build India's first Formula One facility for the 2010 race. Because its 165 km, six-lane Agra-Greater Noida Taj Expressway will cut travel time from four to two hours. Because it's the largest private sector employer of ex-army men. Because the group believes the Ganga Expressway project can be converted into a huge opportunity for the seven crore people who live along the 1,047 km stretch.

NEW TOY: Six jets and choppers to cut travel time. Soon to get two more.

WHAT'S INTERESTING: Buys 18 of everything, for the partners, including 18 Toyota Camrys and houses that are being renovated.

CANNOT DO WITHOUT: His Mont Blanc and his handkerchief, which he changes every four hours.

BANDEEP SINGH