BECAUSE from being a retail giant whose 1,000 stores in 53 cities get 20 crore footfalls a year, his Future Group has expanded rapidly into a $1.5-billion (Rs 6,000 crore) empire, pushing into every possible consumer space, from insurance to credit, either alone or with partners as varied as European clothing companies to the Manipal Group. Because even in turbulent market conditions, the Future Capital public offer that raised Rs 490 crore showed investor confidence.

BIG ACQUISITIONS: Top talent from ColorPlus founder Kailash Bhatia to former Europe MD of Goldman Sachs Sameer Sain.

radio stations and specialised magazines.

THORN IN HIS SIDE: Absence of thought leadership in India.

PAST LIFE: He sold stonewash fabric to small shops in Mumbai.

DIET SECRET: No butter and cheese.

FUTURE MOVES: Major plans to enter media business with a home shopping channel, production house for TV shows, FM

THE WEATHERMAN

BECAUSE as chairman of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC), he orchestrated the efforts of over 1,000 scientists, resulting in awareness about global warming and the 2007 Nobel Peace Prize for the organisation, shared with Al Gore. Because he guides the government's approach towards climate change. Because as head of The Energy Research Institute, he is responsible for popularising solar lanterns and torches.

TOUGH GUY TALK: "If companies and countries don't move towards a low-carbon economy, they will lose political power."

COOL NEW FRIEND: Former US vice-president Al Gore, who had earlier criticised his appointment as IPCC chairman.

REAL ESTATE WATCH: A seven-and-a-half-acre green island in Haryana, his weekend getaway.

BIG LOSS: Noticing that the peaks were bereft of snow this winter at his favourite holiday spot in Mukhteshwar, further proof of global warming.
