

REUBEN SINGH

ABOUT THE DESIGNER

This designer from Nagaland launched his label ATSU in 2006 and, in a very short period, Sekhose, 30, (with model in green) has built a significant clientele amongst the well-heeled in Mumbai and Delhi. A product of NIFT, he started his career apprenticing under Tarun Tahiliani and later worked for Spanish label 'Zara'. His western prêt collection to be showcased at the Fashion Week has an Asian influence. The silhouettes are clean with fabrics like silk, satin, taffeta and handloom fabrics from the north-east. "Even though I'm not showing on the ramp I'm happy. Having a stall is also prestigious," he says.

Amit GT

USP Stress on comfort rather than embellishments. The designs are an eclectic mix of genres.

showing on March 14 on the ramp.

ABOUT THE DESIGNER

When Amit GT (with model in yellow) was at NIFT in 2003, he won the 'CIAE International Young Designer of the Year' award. Once he finished college, he had a brief stint with Ravi Bajaj and Tommy Hilfiger. His couture line is for women attending red carpet events. "My line is for women who exude intimidating confidence and have a penchant for luxe and beauty," he says. He specialises in men's resort wear and traditional and western evening wear for women. His collection for the Fashion Week is influenced by women from nobility.

Atsu Sekhose

USP Think understated elegance. Gives his signature touch to the contemporary pieces.

can be seen In his stall everyday.

Photo: ISHAN TANKHA, Model: Jyoti Popli, Location courtesy: Q&A Restaurant and Bar

