"High and Mighty",
March 10, 2008

"The issue not only provided an insight into the lives of these achievers, but will also teach the youth the mantra of success in today's world."

RATAN SHARGA, on e-mail

Power Point

Every year after going through your special issue ("The Magic Circle", March 10), the first question that comes to my mind is: what is more painful—going down from the first rank to the second, or slipping from one's position of being above the poverty line to the one below it.

RAJNEESH BATRA, Delhi

I feel like tearing the magazine every time I see Parmeshwar Godrej in your power list. She should be locked up in one of those Godrej almirahts and the keys thrown away. It would kill two birds with one stone. That will keep her in the papers for another week and we, the readers, will be spared of her in the next annual list.

ANUBHAV SAXENA, Mumbai

It felt good to see the annual power list yet again. It sure is "power packed" with motivational and invincible people.

S. SHUJA RAHMAN, Patna

One wonders how somebody like Lalit Modi, who was responsible for the auction of fellow human beings, found a place in the power list while renowned musicians like Pandit Jasraj and Hariprasad Chaurasia found no mention.

A. SRIKANTIAH, Bangalore

The issue was easy to read, nay finish, as it offered little reading material. I strongly feel it is a wasteful exercise as same names keep appearing with boring regularity.

DILIP JOSHI, Pune

It is surprising to see that not a single personality from the field of education figures in the power list. How can the magazine ignore those professionals who are doing a yeoman service by shaping the lives of a large number of men and women in the country?

R. VASUDEVAN, Thane

Have the people who run the magazine taken leave of their senses? What has Godrej done that you should put her up there with the rest, all of whom make us proud? She is nothing more than a Page3 personality with a lifestyle which is entirely bankrolled by her billionaire husband.

REKHA KAUL, Delhi

It is high time that these successful businessmen and entrepreneurs, who form most of the power list, gave impetus to social causes and espoused philanthropy like most powerful people in the West do.

Planting Hope

The Kerala Government has turned out to be a harbinger of hope for the farmers ("Pulling Back from the Brink", March 10). Other states need to replicate the methodology adopted by the state to provide their farmers better living standards.

ARVIND K. PANDEY, Allahabad

While the National Rural Employment Guarantee Scheme has infused confidence in the farm-dependent communities, it has sounded a death knell for the agricultural sector. There is a dearth of workers for regular seasonal agricultural activities like harvesting paddy, picking coffee beans etc. Also, the wages that the scheme pays to the labourers are non-viable for marginal farmers.

A Cat and Mouse Game

It is high time the Government constituted a federal park agency to manage wildlife parks as has been done in the US ("Preying on
