

■ By Uday Mahurkar

For many years, the electrical supervisor in Ahmedabad's Asarwa Mill was convinced his life was at a dead-end. His was a humdrum existence, cycling to work everyday and returning home to his personal, but seemingly futile, obsession. He didn't have much of an education—he dropped out of school in Class IX—but he had a big scaling HEIGHT

✱ Mansukh

Project In processing

Can-do lo

Baldevbhai,

"despite being

was a degree

who could do repairing wa

carpentry"

Cotton pro

Sept '07 2

Sept '08

26

Millio

