

MUTUAL FUNDS

One for ALL

Mutual funds have something for every investor. And it is this variety, coupled with good performance that makes them the hottest thing in the investment landscape.

Illustrations by SAURABH SINGH

■ By Kanya Jaiswal

It's the newest kid on the investment block—just 14 years old, if you count from the point private players gave it a glamorous makeover. In size, it cannot even begin to compete with conventional investment products like life insurance, bank deposits, postal savings and stocks. Barely 3 per cent of household savings are invested in it now. Yet, mutual funds have single-handedly changed, no, charged up the investment landscape of India. So much so that today, no financial plan can be conceived by an investor without it.

True, the mutual fund industry has taken its time to capture the imagination of the common man. Initially concentrating on corporate money to increase their fund size, it's only in the past few years that fund houses have focused attention on individual investors in a big way. This has coincided