

eyecatchers

FIRST WIVES' CLUB

They are married to the richest men in the world. And now they are making it on the list that matters. Usha Mittal and Tina Ambani are the only two Indians to have made it to the Wives of Billionaires list compiled by Forbes. In an article on its website, the magazine says, "Gaining membership to the billionaire wives' club is no easy feat. For starters, looks are great, but brains are even better." Talking about 53-year-old Ambani, Forbes says, "Being famous of your own accord is often a plus." They are, of course, referring to her Bollywood stint. Mittal, 55, on the other hand, qualifies for having worked in the steel business for 15 years, along with husband dearest. Just one question though, why exactly was Nita Ambani left out?

Surging High

She's only 22. But Heenal Raichura has done what no one of her age has. The UK-based Indian recently graduated from St George's, London, to become the youngest doctor in Britain. "It's great to see the proud smile on my parents' face everyday. I feel my efforts have been worth everything," says the young doctor, whose father and mother run a wholesale business. Raichura has now been snapped up to work at the University College London Hospital, where she's exploring possibilities of becoming a surgeon among other things. Operation successful, indeed.

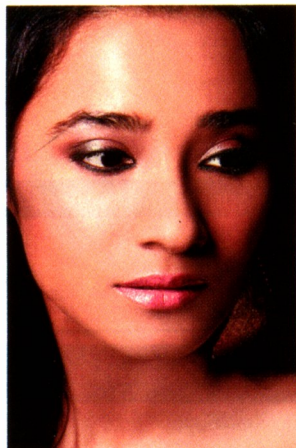

PETER LAWSON/EASTNEWS

THE DREAM ROLE

In 2000, Sandhya Shetty was a Miss India finalist. After doing some forgettable roles in Meenaxi and Kabhi Socha Bhi Na Tha, the black belt hasn't given up yet. She recently shot a song for Tamil film 1977: History Rewritten and will be seen in Arindam Mitra's 17. "I play a princess; a young boy's fantasy," she says. The question is, will she capture the audience's fantasy too?

ASHISH SOMJI/IFA

Just Can't Get Enough

Delhi is her home, but actor Tannishtha Chatterjee, 29, can't let go of her connection to the West. Recently, she essayed the lead role in the British film Brick Lane, the movie adaptation of Monica Ali's book. Now, the National School of Drama graduate is shooting for another. "I select international productions as they give me more scope," says Chatterjee, who will be seen next to Hollywood actor Martin Sheen in Bhopal: A Prayer for Rain. But that doesn't mean that Hindi films are out for her, having just completed Barah Aana. Looks like she's worth every penny.

mint-o
COOL BLUE

XXXL FRESHNESS.

The Big Mint.