"The course structure requires you to work in teams for almost everything, from projects to assignments and presentations," she adds. What's more, exacting standards and long hours mean that students are ready for the 'real world' challenges. This is why IIM-A has been able to race ahead of IIM-Bangalore (IIM-B), despite IIM-B scoring ahead of it on many parameters.

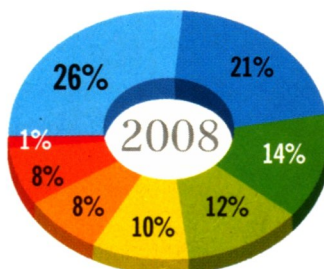

In the BT Best B-school survey, the lack of movement in the higher echelons only betrays a calm veneer. The fact remains that there has been much turbulence after the first six ranks. New entrant Institute of Management Technology, Ghaziabad (IMT-G) has broken into the survey with Nirma Institute of Management, Ahmedabad (NIM-A) making a reentry into the survey after being left out last year. The other movers are Birla Institute of Management Technology (BIMTECH), Greater Noida, Xavier

Institute of Management, Bhubaneswar (XIMB) and Tata Institute of Social Sciences (TISS), Mumbai. "XIMB is growing consistently with a focus on excellent faculty, research and consulting, robust infrastructure and above all, management education. The institute has been working hard in the areas of social development through its social wing, the Centre for Development Research & Training," explains Sasmit Patra, professor and spokesperson, XIMB.

An analysis of individual brand equity indices reveals that many schools gained steam in the priority lists of one constituency but lost out heavily on others. For example, there was a significant drop in rank for K.J. Somaiya (from 17 to 22) and Welingkar (from 15 to 23) in overall ranking although for aspiring MBAs, Welingkar rose from 27 to 10 and K.J. Somaiya from 25 to 21, in comparison to last year. S.P. Jain went up
