

b-schools special

THE COURSE

UNITED WE STAND:
Tomorrow's management graduates are required to be more dynamic

THE MBA MAKEOVER

The curriculum is all set to undergo a major reform with the finest brains in the business trying hard to make the most sought-after education more globalised, practical, shorter and specialised

■ By Kanika Tandon

Change, it is said, is the only constant. The much-coveted MBA programme too will need its share of facelifts to stay relevant. With the chase on for the "great Indian dream" of making the country's presence felt internationally in the years to come, the new-age MBA programme will have to gear up for the challenges of the future by becoming more global, more specialised, more inclusive and more tech-savvy. It should also offer more industry interface. "The new-age MBA," says Dr Bala V. Balachandran, dean, Great Lakes Institute of Management, Chennai, "will be very global, tech-savvy and futuristic in its approach." An emerging manufacturing hub and