"Mob Rule",
October 22, 2007

"The story makes for a strong media effort to expose pan-Indian impatience with institutions meant to maintain law and order."

VITULL K. GUPTA, Bhatinda

Systemic Failure

Misgovernance, lack of accountability, votebank politics, snail-paced justice delivery system, wishy-washy national ethos—these are an explosive mix and a sure-fire recipe for violence, crime and disorder in society ("Mob Rule", October 22).

S.C. KAPOOR, Noida

In this country we have a system which encourages protests through destruction of life and property. The inability of the judiciary to deliver timely justice only encourages mobocracy.

JOHNSON J. PUTHANANGADY,

It is clear that the common man has become restless. Gandhian ideology has faded into oblivion and people have learnt to acquire things they want in any possible manner.

ADITYA P. BANKAR, Bangalore

Frequent instances of vigilantism and mob violence can be looked upon as a warning to a nation, where the governance apparatus is falling apart. Immediate resurrection of legislative, executive and judicial credibility is what we need today.

Y.G. CHOUKSEY, Pune

While judicial apathy and police laxity is fuelling mob rage, the government has turned a Nelson's eye towards the root cause.

K. CHIDANAND KUMAR,
Bangalore

Mob fury is an expression of self-proclaimed justice to avenge social inequity, which a majority of people have been enduring for quite some time.

K.V. RAGHURAM, Wayanad

Power Gone Wrong

Equating vigilantism with mob fury is wrong ("The Law in Their Hands", October 22). Vigilantism has to be a movement. It is our duty to break the nexus between criminals, politicians and bureaucracy, which have stuck to our system like leeches and have been sucking our blood.

RANBIR S. BHATTI, Bangalore

If we seriously want to get rid of corruption, a beginning has to be made with the politicians ("Needed a Strong Moral Fibre", October 22). Every state should have a fast track court to try errant politicians, something difficult to achieve.

RAMESH AGARWAL, Kanpur

Keep the Deal on Hold

It seems that the Congress has finally realised the positives of keeping the nuclear deal on hold ("Politics of Now or Never", October 22). The party may well stage a comeback in 2009 owing to a high growth rate and must not risk its future. The deal can be revived again.

Daddy's Not the Greatest

Children are taught that leaders are keepers of the nation ("Paternal Follies", October 22). Little do they know that a majority of these keepers can't even keep their promises. The humble farmer, H.D. Deve Gowda is one of these master technicians. The way his son H.D. Kumaraswamy backed out of a power-sharing agreement with BJP on his instruction, is shocking.

J. AKSHOBHYA, Mysore

After enjoying the spoils of power for 20 months, it is amusing to know that Gowda has detected a number of snags in the alliance with BJP. In this era of coalitions, his unfair tactics will only strengthen the mistrust between coalition partners. Nobody will be willing to trust each other.
