

Just as the Indian cricket team was able to win the Twenty20 World Cup due to absence of seniors, the country will do a better job too if all the old politicians retired. A case in point is Gowda, whose calculative family-oriented politics is ruining Karnataka.

The New Business Class

Innovation and creativity is the key to acquiring knowledge and a clear vision ("Teentrepeneurs", October 22). This is what the kids did and were rewarded for their dedication.

MANAS RANJAN DASH, on e-mail

Inspired Schooling

Many disabled children are yet to get proper education due to lack of modern facilities ("A School of Sensitivity", October 15). However, the success of Gudbhela High shows the way to bringing such kids in the mainstream and helping them realise their worth. The magazine has done a good job in inspiring others to work for such a noble cause.

Double Standards

The cricket team gets honoured on the cover of the magazine while the achievements of Vishwanathan Anand are tucked away in an obscure inside page ("Many Moves to Glory", October 15). The magazine joins the legions of the hypocrites it routinely chastises.

PRASHANTH KUMAR, Ohio

Tied to Courage

Rakhi Sawant may sound loud and act crude but she deserves an applause for her sheer hard work and determination ("Drama Queen", October 15). She is a role model for the girls of today since she has the guts to dream and fulfil them too.

SANJAY KAPOOR, Delhi

Misplaced Adulation

We have gone overboard with our "welcome" to Sunita Williams ("The Real Ms Universe", October 15). She is a US citizen and the country has no contribution in her success. Moreover, spending time in a spacecraft is her job.

SANGEETA THAPAR, on e-mail

Correction

The price of the Vertu Signature phone was wrongly given as Rs 4 crore ("What's Hot", October 29). The correct price is Rs 40 lakh. The error is regretted.

SURVIVAL INSTINCTS

Even though General Musharraf and Benazir Bhutto are together now, they will still find it difficult to revive the economy and bring Pakistan on a par with the world while allowing it to retain its Islamist character ("Still in Command", October 22). This is because the fundamentalists there have wrongly defined Islam to suit their own needs.

MAHESH KUMAR, Delhi

Ever since the bloodless coup in 1999, Pakistan under Musharraf has gone from strength to strength. It seems only natural that the people want to see him in power.

K. PRADEEP, Chennai

Musharraf has been able to hoodwink Pakistan's public into re-electing him. He is a better politician than an army chief. Nawaz Sharif must take lessons from him.

Games People Play

If the bang has gone out of Indira Gandhi and her supporters in the Congress, it is not just another case of post-Diwali blues. A month has passed since Mrs Gandhi's last Napoleonic bid to grab power in the party at the October 15 AICC session in Delhi brought the Congress edifice close to collapse. If the Congress has succeeded in Indira Gandhi retrieving its position from a point of disaster, Mrs Gandhi has not. Her comeback strategy has backfired badly. Clearly she jumped the gun. The collective effect of the Shah Commission's hearings, the hostile receptions she received on her tours of Karnataka, Andhra Pradesh and Tamil Nadu, the Janata Government's efforts to smother her somewhat preposterous allegations together with the kickback from her own party have driven her to a point of no return.
