THE SPLENDOR

■ By Dilip Bobb

This is a monumental work, and literally so. Lavishly produced and artfully designed, photographer Amit Pasricha's images of north India's monuments and palaces are stunning in their panoramic sweep and subtle play of light and shade. Pasricha uses digital "stitching" to expand the limits of what the camera lens can capture. In some, the panoramic image is almost 360 degrees wide. He has shot individual sections without losing perspective, and then merged them to provide a view that resembles landscape paintings.

Despite the technical aids, Pasricha's book is a collector's item for the unique perspective he brings to monuments and palaces that are among the most photographed in the world. What adds value is the access he has been given to photograph the interiors of these palaces in remarkable detail. Each of these photographs is worth framing and hanging on your wall right next to that Tyeb Mehta or Raja Ravi Verma. ■
