

SIPRA DAS

"Manmohan Singh Hammered",
October 29, 2007

"We must admire
Sonia Gandhi and Manmohan Singh for not staying adamant
on the deal in order to look tough and uncompromising."

D.B.N. MURTHY, Bangalore

Nuclear Fissures

The reason why the prime minister is a disappointed man today is because he has actually been nominated and not elected for the job ("Manmohan Meltdown", October 29). Most Congress and UPA leaders do not consider him the final authority and run to the super prime minister for everything. It is high time he told them he had had enough.

K.R.P. GUPTA, on e-mail

The accidental politician (Manmohan Singh), has been outmanoeuvred by "professional politicians".

J.S. ACHARYA, Hyderabad

It is unfortunate that the image of a person, with impeccable credentials like Manmohan's, has taken a beating due to the Left's rigid stand and the U-turn by people whom he considered allies.

BAL GOVIND, Bareilly

Manmohan's about-turn on the nuclear deal has proved that his decisions on national issues may not always hold as the allies will always prevail. After all, this is what coalition politics is all about.

P.K. SRIVASTAVA, on e-mail

We must not be too harsh on the country's cleanest prime minister. He is not a typical politician and intellectuals and youth should take a lesson from him. They should come forward and replace the selfish and power-hungry politicians.

MADHU R.D. SINGH, Ambala

The prime minister's supreme confidence in Sonia Gandhi's ability to get all coalition partners on board has led to the present stalemate.

Y.G. CHOUKSEY, Pune

By opposing the operationalisation of the nuclear deal, most political parties have acted against the country's interest. After failing to reinstate A.P.J. Abdul Kalam as the country's President, this is the second time the UPA has failed the people.

S.P. GUPTA, Patna

Immoral Forces

At a time when the jawans are committing suicides and fratricide and the middle level leaders are queuing up to leave the Army, the top brass is busy fighting over Gymkhana Club positions and the quota of higher ranks vis-à-vis other services ("Rot at the Top", October 29). The CBI raids are now taking away whatever sheen was left of the army.

KARAN KHARB, Noida

A 20-something cricketer or a Bollywood actor commands ten times more than what a starred General gets in his lifetime. We have forgotten that soldiers have risen from the same soil that has made billionaires out of nobodies. The temptation to misuse authority, therefore, has never been as overpowering as it is today.

RAVI BEDI, Jodhpur

Playing on the Wrong Side

Keshubhai Patel and other dissidents should be ashamed of themselves for sharing stage with the Congress ("My Enemy's Enemy", October 29). This move will surely boomerang on them and they will be blown away in the upcoming assembly elections in Gujarat.

A.K. SHARMA, Chandigarh

The media and the Congress should stop pillorying Narendra Modi on some unfortunate past event. What is imperative is the resolve to avoid repetition of such a gory incident in the country.

S. LAKSHMI, on e-mail