

film review Sting in the Tale

IT'S BREAKING NEWS

Director: Vishal Inamdar
Starring: Koel Purie, Rahul Vohra

"And this is the stretcher that superstar Rahul Kapoor used. It's now being called the celebrity stretcher," says the frenetic TV journalist, reporting live from inside a hospital, in a tongue-in-cheek replay of star Amitabh Bachchan's hospitalisation. It's Breaking News is full of such ironic

REPORTING LIVE: Koel Purie asides, taking off as it does from the actual incident of a senior police officer being accused of molestation on camera.

The movie, made on Rs 2 crore collected from 211 contributors and directed by debutant Vishal Inamdar, is quite an unravelling of sting operations, with comments on the news channel explosion and the Broadcast Bill thrown in for good measure.

As the journalist with a late-awakening conscience, Koel Purie is good while first-timer Swati Sen is quite gripping as the victim who ends up almost reconciling with her fate. The production values, however, are dangerously thin.

by Kaverie Bamzai

music reviews Mystical Strings

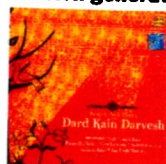

There is something about the Sufi tradition that attracts musicians and dancers. Sufis were familiar with the social conditions affecting the common man. So their poetry speaks of their thoughts in a simple language. And this is what has made them popular.

RANG DE MAULA
Rashmi Agarwal presents eight poems of Bulleh

Mystica Music
Rs 195

Shah, Hazrat Amir Khusrao and Baba Sheikh Farid in her inimitable style. Though the treatment to the compositions is contemporary, the songs are grounded in a classical tradition. "These songs are a celebration of life and a prayer to be united with the creator," says Agarwal. There is a remix version of Rang De Maula, which has a lounge music feel. Sufi music for the modern generation.

DARD KAIN DARVESH
This album showcases how brilliantly Puran

Sa Re Ga Ma
Rs 225

Shakhoti, Wadali Brothers, Asa Singh Mastana, Surinder Kaur, Jagjit Kaur, Bhupinder Singh and Hansraj Hans can render Punjabi Sufi poetry and make it timeless. Each one has a different style and interpretation. While Wadali's style is that of the Patiala gharana, Hansraj Hans sings more of Punjabi folk. The recording have been supervised by well-known music director, Khaliyyam. Worth your music shelf.

by S. Sahaya Ranjit

film festival Epic Poetry

DELHI Cinema can be poetry in motion but imagine a festival dedicated to movies that are inspired by poetry. That's the Sadho Film Festival at Alliance Francaise on October 13 and 14. The festival will travel next year to 20 cities.

From Songs of Resistance, two films from

A still from Of Buddha and Other Beings

Anjali Monteiro and K.P. Jayasankar, which depict the struggles of Tamil women poets, to Of Buddha and Other Beings, by Nandan Saxena and Kavita Bahl—inspired by Japanese haiku—the festival has 85 poetry films from 23 countries.

art Painting to Glory

MUMBAI Issues such as violence and ethnic disputes in society reflect in Shakuntala Kulkarni's collection of paintings and video installations. Titled And When She Roared the Universe Quaked, the exhibition comprises installations of six video films. "Four films are about the games I played as a young girl. Today, through the same games I convey viciousness, victimisation that pervades the entire society," says the artist. The other two films use images of ceremonial martial arts, which are not just about self-defence but about defeating the opponent with dignity.

Kulkarni, who has chosen Aikido and blocks from karate to convey her Kulkarni's work idea, believes that these art forms help strengthen one's character. Her paintings on fabric are layered with charcoal and acrylic drawings and torn pieces of fabric, which create a feeling of violence and yet have a sense of calm. The exhibition continues at Chemould Prescott Road till October 30.

by Aditi Pal