

Bose Acoustic Wave System

HEAR THE ANGELS SING

This one lives up to Bose's tradition. The system produces rich stereo sound from a small enclosure. Is equipped with a CD player which offers the facility to skip, scan, repeat and continue playing your favourite music. Comes with five preset AM and FM channels which allows easy access to your favourite radio stations. The credit card-sized remote control allows you to control the music system from across the room. Its compact and moulded inset allows you to take music wherever you go.

iPhone

FUNCTIONAL FANTASY

Though officially available only in the U.S., an 'unlocked' version is already doing the rounds here. The music crashes if you multi-task too much and features like the Google map and browser are erratic at best. The sensitive screen covered by optical grade glass allows the user to scroll easily through menus and navigate lists.

PRICE: Rs 30,000 approximately

Samsung 70" LCD TV

A REAL SIGHT

Samsung uses multiple LED backlight units to intuitively sense signals and adjust the brightness levels to produce a dynamic contrast ratio of 5,00,000:1. The sound system comprises two built-in hidden sub-woofers that boost more power into lower frequencies of the 2.2-channel stereo. Can be hooked into digital cameras and MP3 players. Its high-definition quality comes at blacker blacks, ultra-sharp images and vivid colours. PRICE: Rs 24 lakh
