

it's party time with INDIA RISING

The numbers couldn't have been more stunning. In a year of wide-spread political confrontation, there was no conflict or over-growth. What's obvious is that this private boom now needs to be made public property.

By Shankar Aiyar

Figures can be as eloquent as pictures, worth a thousand words. India Rising is a story best told through numbers. India's gross domestic product (GDP) now has 13 digits after the dollar sign, having touched $1 trillion and growing at 9-plus per cent for the past three years. This means that at current population levels and 9 per cent growth, per capita income could grow by $100 every year. To appreciate this growth, look back and you realise that our per capita income was stuck between $300 and $700 for over a decade since 1991. Last month, Prime Minister Manmohan Singh promised the biggest hikes

WEALTH SURGE

The BSE Sensex rose from 14,000 to 20,000 in 249 trading sessions in 2007

13,942
Jan 2