

R.S. PATHAK [b1924] Integral Writ

The former chief justice, who led the controversial oil-for-food enquiry, also brought relief to the victims of the Bhopal gas tragedy. An internationally renowned jurist and a master of civil law, Justice Pathak was a man of integrity whose pronouncements will be writ large on the walls of jurisprudence for years to come.

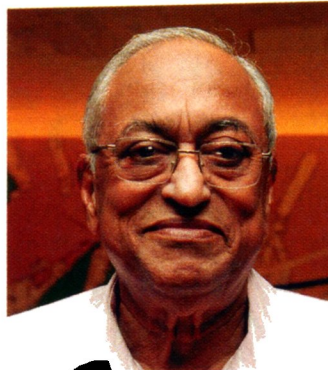

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

ARVIND NAROTTAM LALBHAI [b1918]

A Stitch In Time

The paterfamilias of the Indian textile industry was a visionary. Among the first industrialists to champion modernisation, the Gujarati went the welfare way by adopting villages and setting up trusts for the blind.

MID DAY

DILIP SARDESAI [b1940] Match Maker

The flamboyant century at Port of Spain and the double hundred in Jamaica on the West Indies tour of 1971 inspired the likes of Sunil Gavaskar and ushered in a glorious era of Indian Test cricket. Equally effective against spins and fast balls, the able batsman salvaged many a match gone awry.

RAMCHANDRA GANDHI [b1937]

Grand Legacy

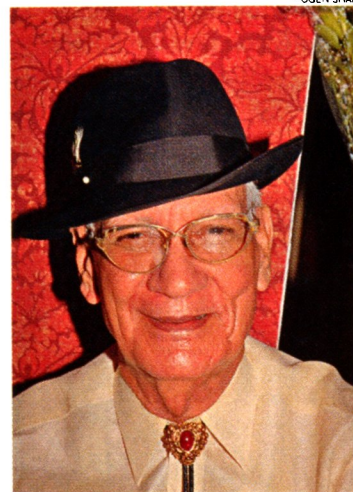

He was the grandson of Mahatma Gandhi and C. Rajagopalachari, but beyond the genes, Ramchandra Gandhi was a philosopher in his own right, who taught at Princeton and other esteemed universities and penned several books. A true intellectual and a lover of art, he breathed his last at the India International Centre in Delhi.

SHRILESH RAWAL

O.P. NAYYAR [b1926] A Different Note

In an era of dreary classical refrains, his quirky melodies and instruments were a breath of fresh air. Hat and hauteur intact, the composer said no to the nightingale of India and commanded an exorbitant six-figure fee.

YOGEN SHAH

RANJIT SINGH SARKARIA [b1916]

Centrepiece

The legacy of federalism was lost in the labyrinth of power before the former Supreme Court judge made sense of Centre-state relations. The Sarkaria Commission went a long way in restricting the mala fide use of Article 356.
