

RAVI S SAHANI

BANAL BOMBARDMENTS

Ronen Sen called them headless chickens and the MPs called him down from Washington D.C. for an explanation. Amitabh Bachchan was slapped on his wrist by being disinvented from the International Film Festival and Ambika Soni (right) was forced to have an out-of-body experience when asked to respond to Jairam Ramesh's (left) comment that he would have resigned on the Ram Sethu issue if he was the Minister of Culture. "I am not Jairam Ramesh," she said. Given the way the Congress has been treating him, ousting him from Congress's Group on Future Challenges, even Ramesh wouldn't want to be himself.

HEMANT CHAWLA

"How do I strive for excellence when the standards in Bollywood are so mediocre?"

VIDHU VINOD CHOPRA, FILMMAKER

NEW STYLE MISSILES

They almost bared their butts, danced against green screens, waited endlessly on a bridge of sighs and played mean and lean. A remarkable lot of new actors including Sonam Kapoor (right) and Neil Nitin Mukesh, was born, most with excellent pedigree and quote-worthy copy. Finally, many more bodies to walk the red carpet, faces to grace the glossies and love lives to track in tabloids. All they need are better films.

COMPLETE PACK-AGE

Shah Rukh Khan (left) showed the way, Aamir Khan followed (but we were promised the results in Ghajini) and John Abraham (right) spent the whole of No Smoking talking to his bare chest—everyone else was rumbled.
