

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

Never mind what the dirty minds thought. Journalist Aroosa Alam (left) called a press conference and declared there was nothing underhand in her friendship with former Punjab chief minister Amarinder Singh. Sienna Miller came to Mumbai and partied with her new best friend Salman Khan while Ashley Judd talked AIDS and India with Akshay Kumar.

HEROIC REVELATIONS

Dev Anand (right) revealed quite a bit about the lovely ladies in his life, Vyjanthimala claimed her emblematic affair during Sangam was a publicity ploy (sending Raj Kapoor's sons Randhir and Rishi into purple paroxysms) and the Dutt daughters proved why Nargis and Sunil Dutt are remembered even today. By the year-end, Manoj Kumar also announced his memoirs (in between quarrelling with Shah Rukh Khan).

ROSES AND POSES

From girlie gowns for A-list stars to ramp walks for the starlets, Bollywood and fashion were joined at the hip. From Bipasha Basu (above) to Kangana Ranaut, there was not a single self-respecting actor who hadn't walked at one of the four fashion weeks. Luxury brands went the product placement way acquiring star endorsers from Karan Johar to Farhan Akhtar.

JURASSIC JUDGES

Every dinosaur has his day. So if it was Jeetendra (extreme left) who became the judge for Jhalak Dikhla Jaa 2, Simi Garewal did the honours for Say Shaava Shaava and Mahesh Bhatt sputtered successfully on Jhoom India. "There are no second acts in American lives," said the late F. Scott Fitzgerald. Clearly, he hadn't been to India.

"I can't comment on whether my performance was towering or not. Aamir may be right. May be it did go over the top of his head."

AMITABH BACHCHAN ON AAMIR KHAN'S CRITICISM OF BLACK

DHONI'S LATE CUT

The Ranchi boy went from being the wicketkeeper to the catch of the year, leading India to a Twenty20 victory. Whether it was inviting actor Deepika Padukone to a cricket match or bringing Mumbai to a standstill with his ready wit, M.S. Dhoni became cricket's newest celebrity crossover.