terror strikes DESTINY'S CHILD

Assassinated on December 27 after a PPP rally in Rawalpindi, Benazir Bhutto was the leading opposition candidate in the forthcoming Pakistan general elections. Her death leaves a void in the country's politics that will be difficult to fill, though the Bhutto dynasty lives on through son Bilawal, 19, who has been made chairman of the PPP and husband Asif Zardari who will call the shots.

PEOPLE POWER

More than 1,00,000 people attended the funeral of slain former prime minister Benazir Bhutto. The closed coffin draped in the Pakistan Peoples Party colours was carried through the 7 km journey to the family mausoleum at Garhi Khuda Bakhsh, a village in the southern province of Sindh. The centre-left political party with the creed of, "Islam is our faith; democracy is our politics; socialism is our economy; all power to the people", will contest elections hoping to cash in on the sympathy wave.
