

EAST: Depressing

North by North-east seems to be the message here. Take out the states of the North-east, and the east zone reflects a depressing picture. West Bengal, Chhattisgarh, Orissa, Jharkhand and Bihar seem caught up in a race downhill. There is yet hope for states like Chhattisgarh, Orissa and Jharkhand provided they catalyse investments for industry using their mineral wealth for growth.

SOUTH: Stalling

High literacy, good healthcare and availability of skilled manpower promised a southern surge in the last two state rankings. However, it seems the south is slipping. It could yet live up to its promise if the states reduce the gap between investment intent and investment on the ground. Kerala may be a lost cause but Andhra Pradesh and Karnataka could emulate Tamil Nadu.

WEST: Stagnant

Once the bastion of investment and consumption, the west, it seems, is yielding ground to the north. It could be argued that the stagnation of the west is a case of the base effect. But there is also the issue of politics, poor fiscal management and worsening infrastructure that is affecting the rankings.
