

film review

It's a Turkey

MISSION INSTAANBUL

Director: Apoorva Lakhia

Starring: Vivek Oberoi, Zayed Khan

The title song of this movie goes something like this: *It's possible, it's impossible, bull. Those intelligent words pretty much set the tone for what is supposed to be a testosterone-laden actioner, where bombs explode, men crash through windows and go-go girls sling some guns. The premise is interesting. A tape exists, which shows that an Osama bin Laden-like creature is dead as a duck but various evil forces, among whom is a Rough Guide-reading George Bush clone, do not want this symbol of global terrorism to die. Vivek

MISSION IMPOSSIBLE: A still from the movie

Oberoi, with a perma smirk and a variable tan, swaggers through the movie as a slack-jawed Zayed Khan concentrates his acting energies on working his newly developed biceps. The dialogue is the stuff of a Hollywood B-movie, a mix of "go go, let's go" and "yea baby, let's save the world". A Cleavage Kumari plays a RAW agent, Shriya Saran is a hard-nosed reporter, Niketan Dheer plays a gigantic villain who wears a bowtie to work (and is therefore immediately marked as being shifty), and even Omar Abdullah appears as himself. It's all as wasted as Istanbul's dark beauty.

by Kaveri Bamzai

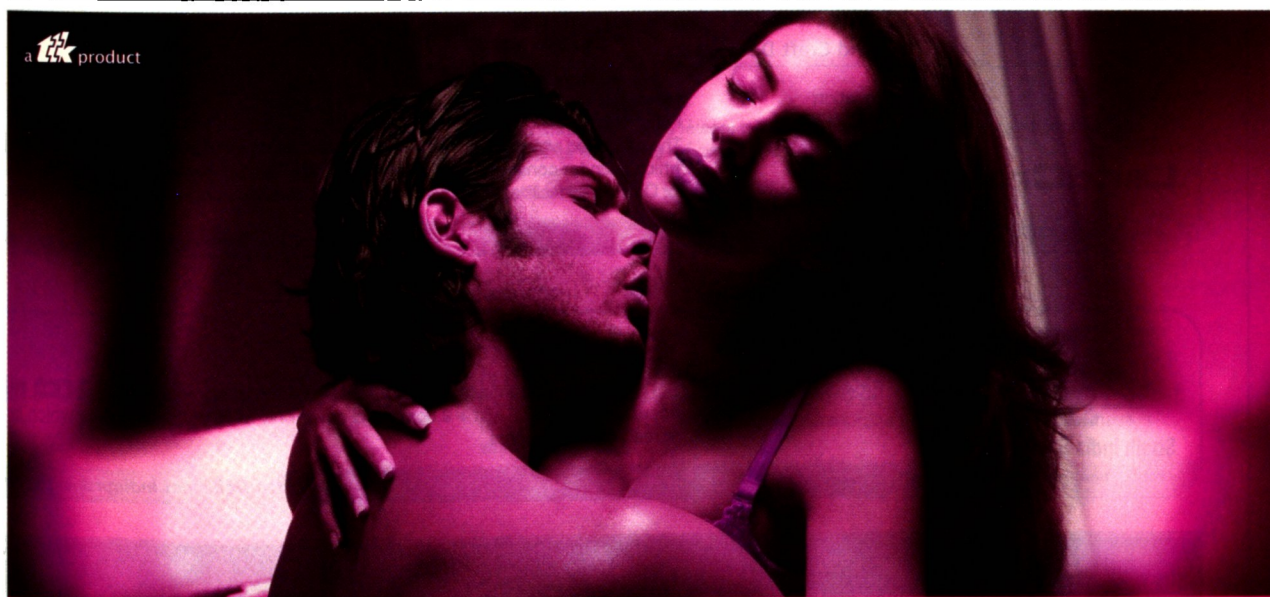

theatre Legendary Act

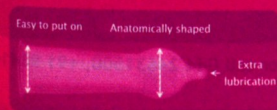

POET IN PROSE: Tom Alter

DELHI In an attempt to revive the fading memory of a stalwart, Mirza Ghalib, a play directed by M. Sayeed Alam will be premiered at the Sri Ram Centre on August 9. Staged by Pierrot's Troupe, the play will see the world's only "Urdu-speaking angrez" Tom Alter in the lead. The stage comes to life against the backdrop of Ghalib dictating notes to Maulana Altaf Hussein Hali for his biography. The 125-minute play has a neutral approach while narrating the story of the legendary poet.

by Sheekesh Mishra

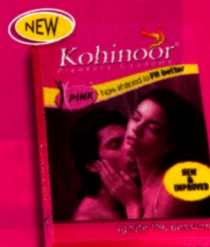

Introducing new Kohinoor Pink
Now in a shape that fits better.

Introducing New Kohinoor Pink. Its new anatomic shape moulds itself to your contours to give you perfect fit and comfort like never before. The amazing new 'easy-to-wear' feature helps you to slip on New Kohinoor Pink with maximum ease and minimum fuss or fumble. To top that New Kohinoor Pink also has extra lubrication to take your lovemaking to an all-time high.

New Kohinoor Pink. It's as comfortable as it gets.

Easy on you. Easy on her.