

BANDEEP SINGH

"Day of The Dealmaker",
July 28, 2008

"The way Amar Singh manoeuvred and stage-managed the whole trust vote
episode puts even Machiavelli and Chanakya to shame."

H.R. BAPU SATYANARAYANA,
on e-mail

Deal Of The Deals

Samajwadi Party leader Amar Singh, who managed the whole show of trust vote and brokered the power deal, deserves a pat on his back for his endeavours to save the UPA Government ("Day of the Dealmaker", July 28). He foiled the sinister plans of the Left parties to topple the Manmohan Singh Government over the Indo-US nuclear deal. A friend in need, indeed.
K.V. RAGHURAM, Wayanad

Politicians like Amar Singh and his ilk always make the most of any crisis. Till few days back, he couldn't see eye to eye with Congress President Sonia Gandhi. But now, he cannot stop eulogising her, calling her more reasonable and open-minded than others, and promising unconditional support to her and her son, Rahul, in the next elections. There are no permanent friends or foes in politics. It is all about the glamour of power which decides friends and foes in this business of politics.

A.K. SHARMA, Chandigarh

Amar Singh has proved that leaders create opportunities while opportunities create leaders out of dealers. By identifying Mayawati as an enemy and communalism as the greatest threat, he has made his political stance very clear.
Y.G. CHOUKSEY, Pune

Amar Singh used his political clout to garner support in general and votes in particular for the Government. Congress had to choose between the devil and the deep sea, and once it has made its choice, it has to safeguard its interests now. Since the coalition partners are more often than not in the habit of resorting to arm-twisting tactics to get their demands fulfilled, it is better if the Government minds its moves in advance.

SEEMA SINGH, Jammu

The success of the deal-maker in the trust vote reflects the loss of ideologies and values of our politicians. No doubt there was vote, but it was sans any trust. Is that how unfair means will be used in future to justify political ends?
DR (LT. COL.) Y.N.I. ANAND,
on e-mail

Amar Singh has cleverly used the ever-changing political climate to his advantage. He has blatantly contradicted himself time and again. But what can one expect from such a political mercenary? It is not so much about the benefits of the nuclear deal than about power and pelf which matter the most to these dealmakers or the merchants of deceit.
ANJUM M. SAMEL, Mumbai

In Memoriam

Months after 14-year-old Aarushi Talwar was found murdered in her home ("An Unfinished Life", July 28), the police seem nowhere close to solving the mystery. The hit and trial method adopted by the police did not fetch any results but instead slandered a young girl in her death, claiming her father to be her murderer. What more could the Talwars expect from the police?
ROHIT KUMAR, Mumbai

Aarushi's murder and its callous handling by Noida police has made the whole issue murkier. The preposterous story presented by the police regarding the teenage girl and Hemraj, Talwars' domestic help, without any preliminary rational investigation, shows their irresponsible tendency. Had they been a little more cautious, they would have succeeded