

HOW THE LANKAN ARMY TURNED THE TIDE

Before 2005, LTTE controlled a third of the Lankan territory encompassing nine districts. By 2007 it was restricted to two districts in the north. Here's how the armed forces did it.

MASSIVE RECRUITMENT

The Sri Lankan Army has recruited 40,000 soldiers in the past two years creating five new fighting divisions. Pay scales have doubled, welfare has improved and motivation levels have soared.

BETTER EQUIPMENT

A major upgradation of weaponry has been undertaken since 2005 with the forces buying armoured personnel carriers, tanks, multibarrel rocket launchers that give the Sri Lankan Army an edge.

GUERRILLA WARFARE

Instead of training its troops in conventional warfare, the army has developed deep penetration units to carry out guerrilla strikes just as the Tigers do. They now regularly destroy LTTE infrastructure.

THE KARUNA FACTOR

LTTE's top Eastern commander Karuna's (above) split with Prabhakaran has helped the Army not only recapture the east but also gain intelligence about the warfare tactics of the Tigers.

NAVAL BLOCKADE

An upgraded Sri Lankan Navy, assisted by intelligence from India and the West, has been able to inflict lethal damage on the Sea Tigers' capabilities and also block LTTE from importing weapons.

The Sri Lankan Army is attacking from these four fronts