

Clothes Call

Celina Jaitley, 26, looks best in skimpy clothes, so think many. But in Rohit Shetty's Golmaal Returns, the bikini bombshell will be seen in a de-glamourised role (read with more clothes). And she seems only too happy to be playing a "simple" girl in the film co-starring Ajay Devgan, Kareena Kapoor and Arshad Warsi. "It's like being launched all over again. I'm glad that Rohit saw beyond my screen image," she smiles. Clothes maketh a woman, eh?

ON A MELODY TRAIL

Simone Singh is on a mission and it promises to be a melodic one. Though her musical experience may be restricted to singing and playing the guitar in school, the actor who made her TV debut in Heena, is all set to host Mission Ustad for 9X. "The show is based on the worldwide Millennium Pledge which was taken by countries all over the world to support causes like zero poverty, education and equality for all. Here, well-known singers will echo the sentiment," says Singh. Indeed, her mission is possible.

Nose for Beauty

Plastic surgery is not only the domain of Bollywood belles. Tourism and Culture Minister Ambika Soni recently said she had always wanted to go under the knife to correct her "big nose". Soni was addressing the India Health Summit, when she added, "I don't remember since when I have been thinking about it." But even before plastic surgeons could pull their rate cards out Soni recanted and said she had spoken in jest to liven up the proceedings. And we thought she only had a nose for politics.

CASTING COUP

Kapoor clan's latest screen-scorcher Ranbir, 25, will soon be seen onscreen with parents Neetu and Rishi Kapoor. This casting coup will be seen in a public service campaign on HIV. And while junior Kapoor has reportedly said he is nervous about acting with daddy dearest, Rishi vouches for his son's confidence. "I am happy that we are coming together to work for a worthy cause," says Rishi. The Kapoors, it seems, are keeping it all in the family.
