plans for his family.

Revanna's choice—and Kumaraswamy had outright rejected Gowda's suggestion that he propose his elder brother's name for deputy chief ministership—Gowda rushed from his daughter's house in Padmanabanagar where he currently resides, to the m(s) legislators meeting.

Kumaraswamy had by then managed to get a majority of the legislators to back him. Fuming, Gowda left the meeting, determined that if he did not call the shots, nobody else would. Confident that his father's intervention will work, Revanna had already instructed the Department of Personnel and Administrative Reforms (DPAR), that spent nearly Rs 10 lakh on Yeddyurappa's inaugural function on November 12, to erect a huge stage in anticipation of his coronation as deputy chief minister.

The last straw however was BJP's decision to induct local mining
