

Make Peace, Not War

The Sri Lankan Government as well as the Tamil Tigers must be aware of the fact that none of them can win this war ("Tigers Hit Back", November 5). Both of them claim "success," but at what cost? The island nation is bleeding from this war, and yet, nobody is ready to play any role in trying to work out a peaceful solution.

American, not Indian

It is amusing to see the media hype over Bobby Jindal becoming the governor of Louisiana ("The Indian Rope Trick", November 5). He never talks about his Indian connection and, in fact, his extreme right stand on several issues doesn't go well with the Indian-American community. A person who changed his religion for political ambition will always be guided by local politics. He can never be a global leader.

SAILEN TALUKDAR, Tihu, Assam

Bobby Jindal may not be an Indian, but his roots lie in this country. Instead of criticising his change of religion and letting the sceptics take over, we must treat this victory as the success of Indian community and celebrate it.

Army of Corrupt

For every case of corruption in the army that comes into light, two are swept under the carpet ("Rot at the Top", October 29). This story will continue since most of the corrupt have allegiance with several other senior officers.

Making the World Greener

There can be no denying the need for a clean environment ("Earth's Warriors", October 29). Every country and every citizen must do his or her best to save the environment for posterity and prevent catastrophes.

Political Mess

In any house, the head of the family is responsible for wayward children ("Mob Rule", October 29). However, the magazine has not blamed the heads of the country—the politicians for increasing mobocracy. It is these politicians who manipulate the institutions of the country, resulting in frustration among masses who pave the way for mob rule.

SUNIL KUMAR PAL, London

BLAME THE LEFT, NOT MANMOHAN

The magazine has been quite harsh on the prime minister ("Manmohan Meltdown", October 29). He is leading a coalition which is supported by the communists—the biggest opportunists in the country—from outside. So far, his performance has been excellent.

V.K. NAIR, Mumbai

The cartoon on the cover was both funny and tragic. Tragic because the communists, though quite small in number, have been able to effectively wield power without responsibility.

C. GOVINDAN NAIR, on e-mail

It is the Congress and its power-hungry allies who have taken a U-turn on the deal, not Manmohan Singh. The apolitical prime minister has been forced to look like an opportunist politician.

The Lady's Not for Burning

Recently a peculiarly Haryanvi drama has held the nation enthralled. In a typical theatre script style, the big strong man (Haryana chief minister Devi Lal) "mistreated" a young idealistic lady (his cabinet colleague Mrs Sushma Swaraj). After uttering a few strong words in public, the slighted lady appealed to the village elders (the Janata High Command).

Swaraj

The elders managed to bring about a reconciliation and they both got back together to work for the common good. Swaraj, who held the portfolio of labour, employment and housing, had publicly criticised the promulgation of Section 144 in the Faridabad industrial area of Haryana. Incensed, Lal chose to cut her down to size by divesting her of the labour portfolio. He announced this at a meeting of local industrialists in Faridabad of all places. And then the mud really began to fly.
