

P

adis e of the Vadodara
go.
SURI,
e oldest SIMI, he d to give slip when ice caught tivist in as not only
tor for the blasts and
nting ombs in Surat but took an active part in the Jaipur
mb blasts
mb that osite Hawa
laced by ate in
Sajid
marketing
some time
ing active
rently

TIWALA,
ploma Vadodara
ghts,
la played
portant role
adabad
s. Pipe mbing the ones which caused the Samjhauta Express blast were found from his home.

ALAMZEB AFRIDI, 24: A jobless youth from Ahmedabad who became an Islamic radical at a young age, he was actively involved in both the Ahmedabad blasts and the Delhi blasts in which he is supposed to have assisted Tauqeer and Kapadia. Absconding now, he attended the terror training camp in Pavagadh jungles in May. He purchased bicycles and then planted them in Ahmedabad after tying bombs. The Gujarat Police managed to track his secret mobile phone in the capital on the day of the Delhi blasts at three of the four locations where bombs went off within 60 and 90 minutes prior to the blasts.

ABDUL RAZIK MANSURI, 27: An embroidery unit owner, he had purchased and planted bomb-laden bicycles for blasts in Ahmedabad. His importance in SIMI can be gauged from the fact that he attended its Wagamon terror training camp in Kerala in December last year, where concrete terror plans had been chalked out. He is believed to have been involved with Afridi in executing the Delhi blasts.

MUJIB SHAIKH, 25: A stone polishing artisan who participated in all the meetings that were held to chalk out the Ahmedabad blasts and also in SIMI's famous Pavagadh training camp last May. An absconder, he is believed to have assisted in the Delhi attack.

ZAHID SHAIKH, 27: A mobile phone repair shop owner from Ahmedabad and a matriculate, he played a key role in planning the Ahmedabad blasts. He too has attended SIMI's training camp in the Wagamon jungles. His role was prominent in carrying out surveys of the spots where blasts had to be carried out.

AMIL PARWAZ:

A native of Ujjain and a close aide of Nagori who was also caught in Indore. He was present in most of the training camps that SIMI organised across the country. He is believed to be involved in the court bomb blasts in Uttar Pradesh in November 2007. He was present in Varanasi when a blast took place in a city court.

STRUCTURE & ROLES

■ There is a core group of 12 leaders, of which the only known member is Tauqeer. The others operate from the shadows and intelligence sources say that they could be working on ISI orders. They believe in the same extremist (pure) form of Islam as bin Laden and Mullah Omar.

■ The largest group is codenamed Call of Islam. They are all over 35 years of age and number up to 60,000. They are spread across the country but are present in larger numbers in Uttar Pradesh, Madhya Pradesh, Andhra Pradesh, West Bengal and Kerala, besides Maharashtra. Many are preachers, teachers, professionals and educationists, who on the surface are law abiding citizens but issue instructions to those below them based on orders they get from the top leadership.

■ The group below them is called Ikhwan (brothers), which has 6,000 core members. They are mostly sleepers who are activated for a particular purpose and then left alone to resume their double identities.

■ Below them is a group of 550 members known as Ansars (helpers). All Ahmedabad and Jaipur blasts accused, besides their leaders like Nagori, are Ansars. They not just plan attacks but also plant bombs and buy the raw material for these.

■ The next group is codenamed "The White Falcon". Their job is to enlist and indoctrinate children aged between five and 10 years in the jihadi cause.

■ Finally, there is the group codenamed Muslim Brotherhood. They play a vital role since their main function is to raise funds through hawala and other methods, largely using Muslims serving in the Gulf countries, and keep in contact with jihadi outfits. The body has reportedly enlisted some 10 lakh regular donors, a large number of them in the Gulf countries.