

happened in the Karol and Red Fort areas in a four days, killing four and injuring about 100. A later, four commuters killed and more than 30 in a bomb explosion in near Punjabi Bagh.

Red Fort was once in the terror target and work on the historic building was carried out on over 22, 2000. On over 13, 2001, the seat of democracy, Parliament, attacked which claimed lives. Four years later, in October 2005, 67 and 70 injured in three blasts using RDX in two markets—Sarojini Nagar and Paharganj.

present serial bomb blast in Delhi is part of a changed strategy to use locals to execute the using easily available substances like ammonium nitrate and TNT. The use of ammonium nitrate with TNT has far low capabilities, but when used in crowded it inflicts heavy casualties. In light of the intelligence failure against impending attacks, the security establishment has become reactive. To beef up capabilities to deal (read react) with terror emergencies, Yudhvir Singh Dadwal, commissioner of Delhi Police—by far the largest metropolitan police force with a strength of 60,000—made proposals to expand the force further. On September 17, the Union Cabinet agreed to induct another 17,000 men in its ranks, approved 11 new police stations and ordered CCTV monitoring facility (hopefully, in working condition) to be installed in 58 markets in the Capital. Whether that saves Delhi from further terror strikes is still debatable. ■
